A JEW FOR THE NOBEL PEACE PRIZE

BY RABBI FERDINAND M. ISSERMAN

The "Chicago Evening Post" in a recent editorial urged that Salmon O. Levinson be awarded the Nobel Peace Prize this year. Salmon O. Levinson is the Jewish lawyer who originated the idea of outlawry and who single handedly sponsored it. August 27, the day when the anti-war treaties are to be signed, marks the culmination of the vision of this Jew who rightfully may claim to be an heir of the prophets. We reprint with pleasure part of the editorial of the "Chicago Evening Post." It was entitled "The Nobel Peace Prize."

"It is not improbable that the consummation of the multilateral treaty renouncing war will be a big factor in determining the recipient of the Nobel Peace Prize at its next awarding.

"To whom should it go?

"To M. Briand, whose proposal of an outlawry treaty between France and the United States was the immediate cause of the subsequent negotiations?

"To Secretary Kellogg, who broadened the scope of the Briand proposal, and carried on the official negotiations which have won approval for the treaty from fourteen powers?

"To President Coolidge, who supported his Secretary of State throughout the negotiations, and to whose administration the achievement of the treaty must be credited?

"To Senator Borah, who, as chairman of the Senate Committee on foreign affairs, was the urgent political personality behind both Secretary Kellogg and President Coolidge in promoting the negotiations?

"In our belief the award should be made to none of these, commendable and essentially valuable as their efforts have been.

"It belongs justly, if it be made on the basis of this treaty, to the able and indefatigable Chicagoan with whom the idea of outlawry originated while the Great War was still in progress.

"Salmon O. Levinson should have the Nobel Peace Prize. It is not in any sense an exaggeration to say that had it not been for the forcefulness and persistence with which he advocated his idea, both in this country and in Europe, the multilateral treaty renouncing war would not, to-day, be on the road to certain ratification.

"An interesting thing about the Levinson campaign to get this idea before the world is the fact that it has been largely a one-man campaign. Most men, when they get an idea that they think of importance to their fellows, either write a book about it or form a propaganda organization. Mr. Levinson has done neither. Others have written books about the Levinson idea, and organizations already existing have helped in a small way to promote it; but Salmon O. Levinson has been his own book and his own organization. He has spent his own time and his own money for the last ten years and more in reaching the ears and the understandings of key men. He has raised no funds, invited no subscriptions, enrolled no members, subsidized no agencies and launched no magazines. But he has been to the capitals of Europe. He has talked with statesmen and publicists. He has commuted between Chicago and Washington.

THE "BUILDERS"

Will Zion be built? There need be no doubt on this score. For have we not a host of zealous builders meeting at Ste. Marguerite, this week-end to build Palestine? Chief architect, Rabbi Zlotnik, and head draftsman, Rabbi Berger, will be on hand to discourse on the building activities in which the grand army of builders—the "Ha' Bonim" is engaged. Rabbi Zlotnik's contribution to the building programme will be a reading of his latest Yiddish translation of Ecclesiastes. Rabbi Berger will no doubt stimulate the building propensities of the audience by a sermon on the portion of the week. The delegates will try on the regalia of their order, play some tennis (the majority might prefer pinochle), dance successfully, and select people to fit the fantastic offices with the archaic names, as designated in the constitution of the order.

Art puzzled, uninitiated reader? We are referring to the annual conference of the order "Ha' Bonim" (which means builders) which is being held in the Laurentian retreat near Montreal. The order is nothing more or less than a group of Zionist societies functioning in the City of Montreal. These societies might have been ordinary constituents of the Canadian Federation of Zionists carrying on the work required of organized Zionists. But it has chosen to invest itself with a special character, borrowing its peculiarities from the Greek-letter societies and the hollow fraternal lodges. So it has come to pass that if one wishes to be affiliated with organized Zionism in Montreal, one is obliged to subscribe to the tomfoolery of the Ha' Bonim lodges. To begin with one must put up with the silly pretentiousness of the very name of the order. There have been in the past and there are now various groups of Zionists banded to perform special functions in connection with the Zionist ideal. All these groups have selected names which are regarded as being descriptive of the special nature of the organizations. Thus we had the "Hovevei Zion"—lovers of Zion, the Poale Zion, consisting of the Jewish labour element, the Revisionists, the Zionists—Territorialists, the Zionists Democratic Fraction, Mizrachi—the religious wing—each group representing a distinct phase of Zionist thought or activity. Compare with these organizations our Canadian brand of Zionist distinctiveness—the "Ha' Bonim"—builders. The builders of Zion forsooth!

What has the Ha' Bonim order contributed to Zionism in Canada? What does it stand for? To be sure it has lent a certain amount of colour to Zionism—the colour of the absurd little caps which the members are supposed to wear at meetings. It has contributed the phraseology of its ritual to the mass of Zionist verbiage which passes current among Zionists. The value of such ritual we can only judge a priori never having perused it- but we can safely assume that Rabbi Zlotnik would not include it in a compendium of Zionist literature.

It must be admitted that the order "Ha' Bonim" has been the active agent in carrying out Zionist undertakings in Montreal. But why have a Ha' Bonim order for the purpose of doing the work of Zionism? Why cannot the same individuals who are working through the Ha' Bonim order do the same work as Zionists through the Zionist

YOUTH DROWNED

Frightened because the boat in which he was rowing with a friend was apparently going to shoot the rapids opposite Sault aux Recollets, on the north side of Ile Visitation, Joseph Lieberman, 17 years of age, of 3563 Clarke Street, jumped out of the boat and was drowned.

Report of the accident was made to the police of the Sault aux Recollets station by P. Burman, of 3981 Clarke Street, who was also in the boat. Burman told the police that he and his friend had gone to Sault aux Recollets during the afternoon and had hired a rowboat.

They had been rowing a short time when they noticed that they were near the rapids. They became frightened and Lieberman arose.

"Don't jump; we will manage to get ashore with the boat," Burman said he shouted, but his companion was too frightened and plunged into the water. In a few moments he was carried down into the rapids by the swift current. Burman said he managed to navigate his craft to shore before it reached the rapids and he went at once to the police station for help. Officers went to the scene of the accident and below the rapids, but failed to find the body.

DIES FOLLOWING INJURY

Four days after a chicken bone had caught in his throat, Samuel Spivack, aged 27, of 2010 St. Dominique Street, died at the Montreal General Hospital Wednesday, August 15, from bronchial pneumonia. How much the chicken bone had to do with his death is not definitely known, but it was thought yesterday morning at Coroner's Court, when acting Coroner Pierre Hebert, M.D., disposed of the case as a natural death, that it counted as a factor.

According to evidence given at the court by his father, Joseph Spivack the family was at supper on Saturday night Spivack explaind athat his son suddenly felt a pain in his throat due to a chicken bone catching.

The pain becoming more acute on the following day, the younger Spivack went to the Montreal General Hospital. Doctors advised that he should have X-ray plates taken. This was done, but the photograph did not reveal anything irregular.

The matter was left in abeyance until Tuesday when the patient was again taken to the Montreal General Hospital. It was said that on entering the hospital he did not explain what was the cause of his suffering.

On Wednesday an autopsy was made after the death of the patient. It revealed that his ailment had developed into bronchial pneumonia.

COMMITS SUICIDE

Sadie Tobin, aged 31, of 87 Marie Ann Street West, mother of three children, gashed her throat with a razor Wednesday morning, August 15, dying a short time after reaching the hospital. It was explained that she had been in ill health for some time, and of late had been particularly depressed. A verdict of suicide was returned.

HERE TO COLLECT FUNDS

Professor Ghilischenschi, who helped organize the "Morgenroit Kultur-House" in Czernovitz, is in Montreal to collect funds to make the institution self-supporting. Editor, CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW.

At a meeting of the Hebrew Maternity Hospital, at the Baron de Hirsch Institute last, a committee of nine was appointed as follows: L. Cohen, A. Bronfman, A. R. Darwin, H. Gordon, C. B. Fainer, J. Budyk, H. Wolofsky, Dr. M. Weisman and Dr. Eidlow. It was decided to close the hospital November 1, instead of July 15. Realizing the danger of this building in case of fire the lay board has therefore renounced responsibility since July 15, in case of any loss of life.

The reason for delay is that the General Hospital Committee has kept back the Maternity Hospital Board from going ahead with the election, waiting for their report and the feasibility for a general maternity hospital. It seems that the public is not very much in favour of a Jewish general hospital. They are more in sympathy with the idea of a maternity hospital, for which the committee, with the aid of the Board, expects to launch a campaign within a very short time.

The management of the hospital will, however, keep up the good work, by assisting any patients, by making grants and other means from the fund collected by the members, to be taken care of in other hospitals, where their safety will be assured, and care especially will be taken of the babies, who are exposed to cold and inconveniences in the present building.

Our Jewish community should take more interest in building a Jewish maternity hospital than they have in the past. It is surprising, considering the Jewish population that we have, that we should not be able to build and maintain an institute of that kind. Other cities, much smaller in size than Montreal, have as many as 200 bed hospitals. If there is any city that needs a Jewish maternity hospital, it is the City of Montreal, for our Jewish mothers need better accommodation.

The Story of Immigration

By HON. THEODORE G. RISLEY, Solicitor of the Department of Labour

The question of immigration has been discussed a great many times, and we all know that the study of the migration of mankind has been a study of the dispersion of humanity over the face of the earth in all ages. Man has always been migrating, moving to newer countries, going in hope and in search of better conditions for himself and for his children or to escape disaster and oppression and religious persecutions and wars. And then, too, we all have the spirit of hope. That is why we progress. We are always seeing something better in the distance from the time we were little tots and we were told that there was a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. "Distance lends enchantment to the view and robes the mountains in its azure hue."

We realize the serious problems and the vital interests in all people of the more highly developed countries of the world in the problem of immigration. One hundred years ago you seldom ever heard it discussed. Economists and writers dealt very little on the problem, but it has become a great problem in the last century. Within the last eighty years there has come to the United States from the countries of the world approximately thirty-eight million people, more than the entire population of the United States when the Civil War broke out—as many nearly as all the people that dwell in England to-day. There never had been such a movement of the human race before and there probably never will be again because never in all history was there ever offered such an opportunity to the immigrant as the United States offers. Now we realize many of us, you who have been in the old world, the over-crowded conditions of the older countries in the world, where they are josseled on each others heels, seeking employment, seeking opportunity, longing for a chance to get somewhere, not particularly for themselves but for their children, and it is the love of children, the love of doing something for your children, you older people, that has brought the greater part of the emigrants to these United States. You came here so that your children might have opportunities.

In the year 1880 this was an agricultural country, but now it is the greatest industrial country in the world. Why? Because millions of foreigners have come to the United States and with their efficient hands, stout hearts, have put their whole soul into the material welfare of this country, until to-day it is the greatest industrial country of all the world. They have come and have employed themselves and adapted themselves to our great inventions and so we have become the most productive people in all the world.

Our foreign population has gone into these great industries of ours and has built up this wonderful industrial system.

When the World War came on, you know there was a great deal of disquiet; there was a great deal of anxiety in this country. We had thirty-six million people in this country who were either foreign-born or the descendants of foreign-born and many of these were from countries in which we finally had to go to war. We never had any international conflict, and the millions that have come to us from the old world were with us.

In the old days when the foreign people came here they were allowed just to arrive, nobody met them at the ship; there was no Society; no Emigration Societies to care for them. They came here from the land that they loved. They came away from the little homes in the old lands they loved; from the scenes of youth; from the meadows in which they played; the brooks in which they paddled; away from the place where they first saw the song of the lark; away from the sanctuaries and synagogues where they worshipped; away from the graves of their loved ones and their friends; strangers to our language and to our principles; nearly all of them without money. The first thing they thought of and the first thing they had to do was to get a job; to get employment and you see how they were handicapped in those days. Now, see what you people do yourselves. You realize that when these people come from a strange land, you go and meet them and do you know what it means to them when they come here? How did you feel when you left the old country to come here and got on the ship? When you came here, you just looked around and you wanted somebody to smile at you; you wanted somebody in this great big strange land to come and say "You are welcome," didn't you? You wanted to see a happy face, didn't you? You wanted to be well received, that is what you wanted to do. I have seen them as they got off, sometimes coming from the old country into this new land, where there is so much wealth and splendor; going to the city and seeing wonderful automobiles and the splendors of this great city and meeting their relatives that have gone before, so nicely dressed and living in so promising a manner; it seemed like Paradise and I have said to myself, there must come into the hearts of many the words, "Should I live a thousand years I ne'er forget this day," and you will never forget the day you let him in and the impressions you first got when you landed in this country, just as the impressions that are made upon the child. They are the ones that remain with you. If you hear some fellow shout out "O honeyuck" he would shake his head and would not understand what he said. No doubt about it, but if he looked at you with a great smile then you would say to yourself, "They welcome me here, this is a good place, they make you feel good." And so we want to give the immigrant when he comes, we want to give him a good impression. Because the first impression will be a lasting one and, as I said, the impression that the immigrant gets when he first comes to this strange land is one that prevails and remains with him and it is the one that shapes and molds his character and influences to the greatest extent his life in this new country.

Here in the United States we have ninety-six languages and dialects spoken. We have the greatest cosmopolitan population in the world. Never before under one flag were so many people of so many different races and religions assembled together living in peace and harmony. And why is it? It is because this is a land whose Constitution provides that religious liberty and political liberty are two of the greatest blessings of humanity. Call the roll of the names of Switzerland and Palestine and Germany and Spain and France and you will find the pages of American history illuminated with the names of foreigners who came from the different lands of the earth and brought something in science, something in wisdom, something in knowledge to this great country of ours, and which has become part of our country, and so we owe something to every country, and to every race and to every religion. Civilization did not originate in the United States. It has made great advancement here, but we owe something to all the peoples of the world. This is the land where hate should die. This is the land where strife should cease. Let us purge ourselves from poisonous thoughts and be worthy of this great land of ours. Every race has its ideals. Whenever a nation or a kingdom or a principality ceases to have ideals, it perishes. That is true of all history and if God Almighty had not implanted ideals of humanity in our land, we would not be existing to-day. You have the Hebrew religion because of its ideals and you have lived up to them. We have a government because we have political ideals and we live up to them. We have ideals of home, we have ideals of character, we have ideals of society and God help the man or woman who has no ideals. It was ideals that inspired Michael Angelo to carve the statue of Moses. It was ideals that inspired Raphael to paint the Sistine Madonna. It was ideals that inspired old John Bunyan to write the greatest of all human allegories, "The Pilgrim's Progress," and Thomas Jefferson to write the Declaration of Independence and Abraham Lincoln, standing on the battle field of Gettysburg, to deliver the greatest human elegy on sacrifice that the world has ever heard. And so here together we must mingle our ideals.

When Lord Charnwood, during the World War, came to Springfield, Illinois, to dedicate O'Connor's famous statue of Abraham Lincoln, when that great historian of Abraham Lincoln looked at that statue, he said: "Abraham Lincoln was the most perfect combination of the practical and the ideal in the statesmanship of the world." We want to make the United States the most perfect government and combination of that which is practical and that which is ideal. There is something more in life than food and shelter and raiment. God Almighty never intended that human beings should be satisfied with only bread and shelter and raiment. He intended that we should develop our minds, that we should lift up our spirituality, that we should catch a glimpse of eternal things that make life worth living and that spirit of brotherhood that reaches out to all corners of the world and teaches the lesson of law and peace and benefaction to mankind everywhere.

The whole country is realizing that it is as important for us to go to the immigrant as it is for him to come to us. We must go to him and give him to understand that the fact that he was born in a foreign land shall not be a handicap to him nor to his children and that so long as he is true to the ideals of this country, so long as he is loyal to the great principles of the flag, he shall have equal protection, equal rights in this land of liberty and he shall stand clothed in the robe of an American citizen of which all men may be proud.

This announcement was made by Mrs. Belle Moskowitz at the Biltmore, who also said that Bernard M. Baruch would receive a prominent part in the campaign on his return from Europe next month. Mr. Baruch probably will be placed in charge of the agricultural division, she said, for Mr. Baruch has devoted himself considerably to farming problems in recent years, despite his Wall Street interests.

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancour
That for what it cost me to be free
I might have had an anchor."

Often THE REVIEW is in receipt of communications it cannot share with you, much to its infinite regret. But here is something you may find amusing. It began with the following letter from a man who must be called Mr. A.:

"Just why I must write to you in preference to any of a thousand others, I do not profess to know myself. Perhaps it is because I have experienced that literary people have a wider conception of the many phases of life and a greater understanding of the vagaries of human nature than any other class. I find myself, at twenty-four years of age, facing, in reality, a situation which has been exploited by fictionists almost to the point of exhaustion, i.e., that of having a limited period, whose maximum limit is a year, to live. I would be content to accept my fate with some degree of philosophy, but for the birth within me of an ambition, if such it can be called, which has grown now to the proportions of a madness, an ambition to render, before I take my final curtain in this world, a lasting service to my people. My father, like the central character of Dr. Benzion Morrison's article, 'Living One's Own Life,' which appeared in a recent issue of THE REVIEW, 'was one who was a Jew in spite of himself,' but in my case he never quite succeeded in doing for his offspring what he had succeeded in doing for himself. Thus, after his death, after which I migrated to Canada from England, I gradually drifted, in spite of years of isolation, back to my own people, and found with them happiness in spite of my appalling ignorance of the life of the Jewish people which so often acted as a barrier between they and I. But you are wondering to whence all this leads? It leads to this: that I, who have constructed with ease the plot of many a story in the past, am utterly at a loss to shape the final plot of my life. In spite of this ambition which is my obsession I am seemingly powerless to give to it a means of expression. Though you may not make use of it, you are no doubt well versed in the technic of the short story. Grant my request, take this theme, one of the oldest and greatest, which has dominated life from time immemorable, construct your plot, guided by your own individuality, and then, if I may ask so much of you, tell me, what would you do?"

THE REVIEW sent an investigator to the address Mr. A. gave in his most arresting letter to discover whether the letter-writer was in good faith and all about him that might be of interest to you. Following is a verbatim excerpt from his report:

"August 14, at 6.15 p.m., THE REVIEW arrived at Mr. A.'s address and inquired from the lady who answered the door if he was living there. She said he was but was out at the present time. We asked the lady if Mr. A. was feeling better, as we had heard he was ill. The lady, who had answered the door, was very much surprised at this and said she had no idea Mr. A. had been ill, as he appeared to be a healthy man. She said he was a chemist and went out to work every day. We asked if Mr. A. was Jewish and she said 'No,' that he did not appear to be Jewish and she thought he was English. She said Mr. A. came to her house to live about five weeks ago and that he was pretty much a mystery. He was continually talking about himself. He had told her he had been in Russia and during the revolution had to leave the country very suddenly. He said he had got part of his education in one of the colleges in Russia and had finished his education in England.

"While we were talking to the lady of the house on the verandah another lady called, asked for Mr. A. and was told he was not in. She stood on the verandah talking for a while and was then asked to sit down. The lady of the house asked her if she were Mrs. A. and she said she was. She said she had been married to Mr. A. in Toronto about a year and a half ago and that five weeks ago she heard that her husband was going around with another woman. Mrs. A. and Mr. A. had quarrelled about this and Mr. A. left home and moved to his present address. We asked Mrs. A. what nationality she was and she replied that she was Spanish and came from South America about three years ago. We asked her if Mr. A. was Jewish and she seemed quite indignant at this question and said he certainly was not! She said Mr. A. was born in England and his people were still there. She said his father was a clerk in a store in Newcastle. We inquired if Mr. A. was writing any short stories and she replied that he wrote short stories and was taking a course in short-story writing in Shaw's Business College. We inquired if he had a short story completed that was ready to sell and she said she thought he had one ready to go on the market. We inquired if Mr. A. was ill and she said 'No. He is very healthy.' We then asked if he was a nervous man, and she said he was very nervous. We then asked if Mr. A. was mentally deranged in any way. She looked at us and said, 'Do you mean is he crazy?' She then said, 'At times he is very crazy.' We asked Mrs. A. if she was working and she said she was working and had worked ever since she was married. We asked if she expected Mr. A. to go back with her again, and she said that he called to see her two or three times a week and that she thought he would come back in the near future. We asked if Mr. A. went to any of the Jewish churches and she said he did not, adding, 'I told you before there was nothing Jewish about him, except that he associated with two Jewish boys in Toronto.' Mrs. A. also stated that he has a Jewish girl somewhere in the city. We asked if she had any idea where this girl lived and she said she had no idea, that she had been told by someone else that he was keeping company with a Jewish girl. We remained until 11.20 p.m. and during this time Mr. A. himself did not arrive. Mrs. A. seemed to be quite sincere in the information she gave us and is very anxious to have her husband come back to her again."

That's all there is to the story. By now Mr. A. and Mrs. A. may have been reunited. It is to be hoped that the budding author was able to think up a satisfactory ending to his business school plot without the aid of THE REVIEW. If he could sell the story and is now spending the money on things he always wanted maybe it's because this column declined to help him without investigating first.

Business Competition Applied to Religion

By JENNIE FRANKLIN PURVIN

It is shortly before noon in the Union depot in the city of St. Louis. The tracks in the train shed are occupied by coaches "made up" for the impending journey. If one walks along the gateways and reads the signs announcing the time of departure and the destination of the trains, one sees that at least five will leave within the half hour for Kansas City; and four others will leave within twenty minutes of one another for Chicago. In each group each train represents a different railroad line. Thus we have a great duplication of design and purpose, of effort, of wear and tear. Consequently we have five railroads doing the work which any one of them could do with the same expenditure of time, energy and funds.

For five trains bound for Kansas City will arrive in the same Union depot with the same difference in time which marked their setting out and four trains will arrive in Chicago with only the twenty minutes' difference in time which separated their start. Furthermore, if we could walk through the coaches comprising the train equipment we would find empty seats in all of them. So that this represents not only duplication of design and purpose and effort, of wear and tear, of time and energy and expense, but also a profligate waste of space, removing the last excuse for the unnecessary competition which exists.

To be sure each of the four lines travelling between St. Louis and Chicago and each of the five which leave for Kansas City touch other points beyond these destinations. But that does not remove our right to question their policy. Reason must be sought elsewhere. The employment situation is not involved, for railroads are not run on an altruistic basis. Nor are the fates of stock and bondholders at stake, for profits would be greater were there but one operating source. Nor do more people travel just because more trains are run. Then why so many roads, lined up for the daily fray, like so many armored battalions in a row, leading one to wonder at the short-sighted policy which involves such foolish competition.

And yet, how many events in man's life, of spiritual as well as material consequence, are conducted on this same needlessly involved basis. Even religion, which should be the last resort of dispute and argument, is deeply in the clutches of any number of sects which vie as enviously as would an equal number of commercial enterprises whose interests crossed one another. The Christian world is torn this way and that by the divisions which have sprung up from the parent root. The only thing which has repressed an even greater scattering of folds is the uniformity of worship which has been established by the various sects, and a central, sometimes a world authority, which regulates many of the details of temporal management.

What about Judaism? Setting aside a discussion of conditions in any country other than our own, what do we find in America? Is our banner of religion raised over a unified whole? Have we the right to say there are no divisions, no differences of opinion, of ideas of competition in our religious household? Or are we like the noon-day trains between Chicago and St. Louis, split into distinct groups, each vieing with the other for supremacy?

Worse, far worse than that. Since the destruction of the temple almost two thousand years ago, Judaism has known no great central home or authority. In our travel down the ages we have carried with us the remembrance of the worship at Jerusalem and for the greater part of the time memory has served us well; so that until the coming of the modern era there were few departures of lasting significance from the practices of our earliest forebears. And for good reason; for we were obliged always to hold our own in the face of great and many adversities.

Adversity is a good teacher. With his back against the wall a man will stand erect to defend himself, with God-given strength, against any foe, for the thing he considers worth while. So it has always been with our religion. As long as the man and woman of Jewish faith were marked for oppression by the peoples of the earth, so long did the Jew believe it worth defending with his life. He needed no other reason for remaining loyal, even to the last jot and tittle of the faith of his fathers.

But the long stretch of years from the reign of Titus in Jerusalem to the first half of the nineteenth century in Europe is but the beginning of our study. When Judaism crossed the Atlantic a new situation arose. In previous times the Jew may have enjoyed some freedom here or there; it had never been of long duration; and often it had existed legally only. Perhaps never, before he came to the open doors of America, had he known the full meaning of the word liberty; here all disabilities were at last removed; here the Jew was free to practise the tenets of his religion to the last iota thereof.

What has been the result? In less than one hundred years the Jew has seen his people divide their religious energy into so many avenues, scatter it over so diversified a road, toss it into so many directions, that the earnestly minded student of present-day religious conditions may with some justification despair of the future. Despair, not only over the multifarious number of camps into which the present house of American Israel is divided, but also, and perhaps more so, at the attitude of these camps toward one another.

American Israel may be divided into four distinct entities. Whereas to the world without a Jew is a Jew, to the Jew himself he is a member of either the orthodox, the conservative or the reform wing, or he brings up the rear by lacking affiliation with any group, a free lance, let us say. With this last-named division we have at present nothing to do save to lament the fact that it is so large. The reasons which have led many of our younger and middle-aged people to abandon the teachings and practices of Judaism are not far to seek. Largely they are the results of modern conditions and the inability of synagogual leaders, in both pew and pulpit, to meet modern ideas unselfishly. But to some no inconsiderable extent our loss of these people who have dropped away is due to the same causes which are responsible for the splitting up of our religious household into so many rooms.

What are all these rooms and who are the people in them? Why are they so separated, with these metaphorical walls between them, instead of being all toge-

The City Without Jews

By HUGO BETTAUER

Can a city expel its Jews and thrive? Would such a condition usher in the millennium, or retard progress? Hugo Bettauer, a Gentile, played with the idea, and produced a challenging novel that describes a state in which all Jews, rich and poor, are banished.

The tragic aftermath of this flight of fancy came in the murder of the author by a fanatic.

"The City Without Jews" quickly became the most talked-of book in continental Europe and went through 58 editions. Jews thought it pro-Gentile; Gentiles considered it pro-Semite.

Wittily, colourfully, without any tincture of propaganda, the author rears his city without Jews. Deftly he raises the curtain behind which a city, rid of all Jews, functions. Fascinated, we watch business, art, night life, and home life in Vienna after the Jews are thrown out. The difference makes one gasp with astonishment!

in one large assembly place? Without carrying the analogy too far, let us ask why there should be an orthodox household or a conservative one or a reform one even?

Because we cannot all think alike; because heredity and environment colour a man's thought even in religion; because geography and religion cannot be divorced and practices which seem essential in one part of the earth may appear altogether inappropriate elsewhere; because opportunity is one of the unequal things in life and carries some ahead financially so much faster than it permits others to progress, setting artificial standards of living which colour even our ideas of ethics and sanctity. And out of these reasons grows the one important cause for separation in religion, the inability to worship according to one fixed standard. It might more truthfully be said that our ideas of what constitutes worship being so far apart in the various divisions of Judaism, it is physically impossible for these divisions to unite under one leadership. Therefore we must have as many houses of prayer as there are types of Jews who still desire to practice formally their religious faith. And therefore in communities, large and small, we have synagogues for conservatives, for orthodox, for reform.

Now if all the Jews in this land were affiliated with one or another of these three wings of Judaism there would be no cause for complaint or trouble. We are so numerous that the existing houses of worship, of whatever form they may be, would in no way be adequate to care for us all. And because we are so numerous it would not even be illogical to classify us into three major groups. Especially, as has recently been stated by a well-known rabbi in Chicago, since one already sees the trend in orthodoxy toward the customs of conservatism, and in conservatism the bridging of the gap toward more liberalism. This growth is inevitable. And it is not this which disturbs us.

Our difficulties arise from the fact that there is no such definite thing as orthodoxy or conservatism or reform. Admitting that the standards in each group are shifting we still have almost as many kinds of orthodoxy and of conservatism and of reform as there are houses of worship or certainly as there are rabbis in each division. And therefore like the railroads these separate congregations are, one and all, in such sharp competition with the other congregations within their own classification that religion takes on the nature, not only of business in general but of the advertising business in particular. Hence we have our orthodox and conservative rabbis sharply eyeing one another to discover what is the latest concession to the time and our reform rabbis resorting to any dramatic means of promoting their particular brand of reform. Out of this circumstance grows the idea that a rabbi must be a great preacher, that he must choose attractive themes for his discourses (for these they are more often than sermons), that he must be a "hale fellow, well met" with his less pretentious members and a paragon of social manners with the more pretentious ones. In the midst of all this confusion the average man is so bewildered that he is almost justified in saying "a plague upon all your houses" for the divergence in interest on the part of both synagogues and their leaders comes at a time when as Rabbi Frisch recently said, "Religion alone can satisfy the demands of man's higher nature. It alone can bring that reinforcement and confidence to the individual which he must have in his struggle to adhere to personal integrity in the face of everything which denies its worth."

This is indeed no time for business competition on the part of religious organizations. While we are agreed that to function fully they must keep thoroughly abreast of the times in science and the other arts, we cannot admit that anything commercial finds a place in synagogual life. Without doubt, therefore, something is needed to bring order out of chaos before we close any of the rooms in our religious household. Like the railroads, we ought to be thinking of means which will fortify our position, at the same time clarifying and simplifying it. How are they to be found?

Martin Kochman, a Jewish lad, has been awarded the La Salle Institute gold medal for the outstanding essay on a Catholic subject. He wrote his paper on "The Life of Blessed Brother Solomon Martyr." A year ago, a similar honour was bestowed upon his brother, Leon. The Rev. Albert E. Smith, in his address to the graduates of the institute, said: "If some of our Catholic people knew their religion as well as these two Jewish boys know it, there would be no need for non-Catholics to declare that they find great difficulty in getting clear explanations concerning the Catholic Church from some of their Catholic friends."

Ground has been broken for the new Brynwood Country Club, near Milwaukee. Morris Stern is president and the club has a membership of about 100.

He has been communicating with the leading ministers of the city with the hope of being able to arrange an inter-denominational service to mark the signing of the Anti-War Treaties in Paris next Monday, August 27. Rabbi Isserman has been invited to address the religious services at Syracuse University in the fall. Much Excitement

The Jewish Community League standing may be so tied up that it will take one or more games before the final results can be cleared up. Should Tuex, Harry Sniderman's team, win their protest against Herzls, they can take first place if Leonards lose their last two games while in the event of Leonards splitting even, there will be a tie for first. As the standing is so close, all ties whether for first, second or third will have to be played off. Monday, August 13, with Bnai Brith leading the leading Leonards, 4 to 3, the game was called at the end of the third with Leonards having the bases full, with only one out. The game will be replayed the coming Monday, when Bnai Brith must win to have any chance for the play-offs. Tuesday, Herzls won from Tuex, 3 to 2, but Tuex have protested the game, claiming that Issie Wilson is not eligible to play for Herzls. In the event of Tuex winning they cannot finish worse than second. The game Wednesday between the leading Leonards and Hasmonians resulted in the best game of the year with Hasmonians winning out 6 to 4, staving off several rallies which almost pulled the game for Leonards. In the last inning, with two on, two out and Bill Sniderman to bat, Sammy Hurwitz made the most sensational catch to end the game. For the winners, Meyer Miller was the big star with two triples and a single, while in the field, Salsberg in left and Katz in centre, made several feature catches. The outstanding fielder was Max Sniderman, of Leonards, who had seven putouts in left. On the Monday just past, the two teams met again, and this time the leaders won 6 to 1, being good value for the win, the losers only getting three hits off "Lefty" Glasner. The Hasmonians were minus Meyer Miller, their star player, as he was playing in the city softball finals with "Lizzies" against Marboros. Donn took his place behind the bat and played a smart game. Joe Benjamin had three hits for Leonards while Zackheim had two of Hasmonian's hits. Max Sniderman was again the star in the field, while Bill Sniderman stood out in the infield. The loser's infield all played good ball, but with hits scarce were not good enough to win. Two very important games are set for the first two days of the coming week, while on Wednesday night should there be any tie, the game will be played on that date. Due notice of this will be given as soon as possible.

Manny Stone stands suspended for one game, and in the event of the said game being replayed, he is ineligible to play, his suspension also standing for this game.

The results of the games recently played follow:

Monday, August 13—						R.	H.	E.
Bnai Brith	1	0	3	—		4	4	0
Leonards	0	0	3	—		3	5	0

Batteries: Grieeman and Bockner; Caplan, Glasner and Gudofsky. Game called at end of third inning to be replayed.

Tuesday, August 14—						R.	H.	E.
Tuex	0	0	0	0	2	2	3	3
Herals	0	3	0	0	0	3	10	0

Batteries: Mahr and Schwartz; Heller, Appleby, Wilson and H. Stone. Game protested.

Wednesday, August 15—									R.	H.	E.
Hasmonians	0	3	2	0	1	0	0	0	0	6	9	3
Leonards	0	1	1	0	0	0	0	2	0	4	4	0

Batteries: Wahl and Miller; Glasner, Gudofsky and M. Sniderman.

Monday, August 20—										R.	H.	E.

Batteries: Glasner and Caplan; Wahl and Donn.

The games so far scheduled for the coming week follow. Fans watch the REVIEW for later games, which may be arranged at short notice. Monday, August 27, Bnai Brith vs. Leonards. Tuesday, August 28, Tuex vs. Herals (if ordered by the president). Wednesday, August 29, play-off of any tie between any of the first four teams.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water, power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil climate farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

BENJAMIN ZURETSKY RESCUES YOUTH

George W. Hewitt, aged 22, of 9 Page Street, was rescued from drowning by Benjamin Zuretsky, aged 24, of 255 Palmerston Avenue, while the two youths were swimming at Turner's bathing beach at the Western Sandbar off the Island Thursday evening.

Hewitt was suddenly taken with cramps and called for help. Zuretsky immediately swam to his assistance. Hewitt had gone under water but Zuretsky managed to get hold of him and to bring him to shore in an unconscious condition.

Lifeguard Carmichael and Zuretsky worked over the unconscious youth for twenty minutes before they managed to bring him around. The rescue took place just off the narrow strip at the western end of the Island. Hewitt had swum out some distance from shore when Zuretsky heard him call out and saw him sink.

organization? Toronto is admittedly a better Zionist centre than Montreal—Zionism is well served here by volunteers without the assistance of an elaborate staff of professional workers—and in Toronto there are no pretentious "Bonim"—just Zionists doing their work as Zionists. There are no "Bonim" lodges in Hamilton, or Kingston, or London or Brantford, or Kitchener where so much proportionately is being done for Zionism. The credits of the "Bonim" in Montreal represent debits on the part of the ordinary Zionist societies.

The "Bonim" order as a whole occupies an anomalous position in the Zionist organization. It is a distinct group with its own governmental machinery, at the same time enjoying representation in the Zionist councils. It is a state within a state. As an organized federation it is able to wield an inordinate influence in the affairs of Canadian Zionism without offering any compensation in the way of a specific ideology or special services.

The Ha' Bonim organization in Montreal may be regarded as an unhealthy growth rendered possible by the weakened condition of the body of the Zionist organization. Zionism in Canada as, indeed, everywhere requires toning and building up. This can be accomplished not by encouraging extraneous growths but by the revitalization of the organism itself with the resultant strengthening of all its parts.

A. B. B.

GETS SEVEN FIRSTS

Abraham Leventhal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Leventhal, 16 Carlyle Street, passed his matriculation at Harbord Collegiate. He got seven firsts in following subjects: Ancient History, Geometry, Chemistry; Latin Authors, Composition; French Authors, Composition.

SAMUEL SOLOWAY OBTAINS SEVEN FIRSTS

When Samuel D. Soloway, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Soloway, 94 Ossington Avenue, learned his matriculation examination results, he discovered that of his nine subjects, he had passed seven with first-class honours; on the other two he obtained one second and one third. Last year he tried the first three of his matriculation examinations and carried off first-class honours in all three. He has already entered for a McMaster scholarship.

During the six months ending in April of this year, the Central Library connected with the Vaad Hatarbuth (Cultural Department of the Palestine Federation of Labour) received over 1,900 volumes, about half of which were collected in various places. The library is doing splendid work in quenching the thirst for reading material keenly felt throughout the labour groups. Through the efforts of the Palestine Labour Fund, the library received a present of 600 volumes from the Association for Palestinian Labour in Vienna, Austria. Of the other important collections received must be mentioned the one coming from the fund of the "Nor Tomid," collected among the American student youth.

"We venture to say there are few, if any, parallels in history to this remarkable development of one man's idea through one man's effort.

"We want the able and unselfish Chicagoan who, more than any other one man, is responsible for it to have the honour which is his due, but which he will never seek for himself."

When there is so much silly talk about the Jews being responsible for the wars of the world, we are happy to proclaim that the most significant effort at world peace since the last war was made possible through the persistence, energy and self-sacrifice of a Jew. Surely Israel's mission is peace.

THREE BIG LITTLE WORDS

HAPPY NEW YEAR

AT the advent once more of the High Holidays comes the beautiful Jewish custom of sending New Year's Greetings to one's relatives and friends. This custom, originated by the Jewish people, is thousands of years old. In ancient Judaea the town crier would carry the message to the dwellers in the villages and the cities, to the country-folk gathered in the towns to celebrate Rosh Hashonah in the traditional manner.

With the flight of time the honourable profession of town crier disappeared. But the deeply rooted custom among the Jewish people of sending "L'Shono Tovu" greetings remained. And there gradually grew up a custom of sending personal greeting cards through the mails. Many of these cards were works of art, and are treasured as heirlooms to this day.

When cities and towns were small, and one knew one's friends intimately, this system worked perfectly. But as cities grew, and one's circle of friends extended, it was inevitable that in the hurly-burly of sending hundreds of cards, some cherished friends were overlooked. The endless explanations and heart-burnings caused the development of a new and better system.

Extend your NEW YEAR GREETINGS to your relatives and friends through the SPECIAL NEW YEAR EDITION of THE CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW to be issued Friday, September 14th.

Fill out the coupon and return to THE CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW, 288 St. James Street, Montreal, or 319 Bay Street, Toronto, before Wednesday, September 5th.

The charge for these announcements is $2, payable in advance.
